The Home Shampoo

MUCH OF THE EFFECTIVENESS of a shampoo depends upon where and how the hair is dried. If it is possible to dry the hair in the sun and air outdoors, it will do the hair three or four times as much good as though the whole operation were completed inside the room.

The hair must be kept antiseptically clean—use soap twice at every shampoo

For this reason, the home shampoo should be better than the professional sort, which costs anywhere from a half dollar to two dollars. Professionals dry the head with a hot-air machine that blows the hair into snarls and dries out much of the new oils that the massage and the hot water have already sent into the tiny hair-shafts. The chief trouble with the home shampoo is that women do not realize that it takes an awful lot of soap to make the head thoroughly clean.

Tar soap or liquid castile is best, the hair should be wet all over, with hot water and the soap rubbed in. The lather should be rubbed hard over the entire scalp and worked with the fingers till every bit of the hair has been gone over again and again with the cleansing suds. Then it should be rinsed off in water even a trifle hotter than the first water. And then comes the important part of the shampoo. The whole head should be gone over a second time with soap and hot water, the new lather rubbed into the scalp, and rinsed again in hot water. See the amount of dirt that comes off in this second rinse and see how much glossier your hair is afterwards, and you will realize that one soaping is not enough.

For the head must not be just clean, it must be antiseptically clean, to avoid dandruff and falling hair. And there is a difference between them.

Of course, every woman knows how carefully the hair must be rinsed and dried, and that a tonic rubbed on immediately after is always advisable.

Questions and Answers

To R. P. R.—Vapor or dry hot air baths will certainly help your rheumatism, and while improving your general health, will also do wonders in clearing the skin. Buy a bath cabinet, or, seated undressed upon a chair under which you have placed your alcohol lamp and pan of hot water, spread sheets and blankets about you to form a tent from the neck down. These will hold in the heat, the hot water will be kept at proper temperature by the spirit lamp under it, the steam will circulate inside your improvised tent, and the pores of the skin will open, throwing out all dirt and poisons. After a time (and if you feel faint, putting an ice bag on the head will relieve you) go into the bathroom or wherever you have placed your tub, and get into a bath of tepid water, followed by one of quite cool water. These close the pores. If the water is quite cool finally, you will not catch cold, though an alcohol rub as a finish will prevent any possible danger.
